

Study the organ with a master!

Instruction on this majestic instrument is available at WestConn: the only such opportunity in the Connecticut State University System.

In addition to classes at WestConn, organ students are offered the opportunity to tour and study in Europe with instructor and master organist Stephen Roberts. On these week-long trips, students attend master classes with some of the most distinguished organists in the world. They attend concerts, visit museums, meet international music students and are afforded the opportunity to play on vintage organs — some dating back to the 16th century!

On its completion, WestConn's proposed School of Visual and Performing Arts Instructional Center will house the famed Charles Ives' pipe organ. Currently, many of the university's organ students receive paid internships through local churches, sometimes earning the full cost of tuition.

WestConn offers undergraduate- and graduate-level study, two beautiful campuses, the latest music technology, one-on-one instruction with notable faculty and individual recital experience — all at an affordable price. We're centrally located to New York City, where performance and employment opportunities for graduates abound.

What are you waiting for?

Learn more about organ studies at WestConn; contact the Department of Music at (203) 837-8350 or e-mail robertss@wcsu.edu.

WESTERN CONNECTICUT
STATE UNIVERSITY